

Signage Strategy – Spirit of 2010 Trail

The Spirit of 2010 Trail is a network of former rail corridors converted to recreation trails, spanning approximately 700 kilometres across southern British Columbia (BC). The province of British Columbia, Trans Canada Trail, and a number of regional and local partners are involved with the five distinct rail trails that have been converted across the province to form the Spirit of 2010 Trail.

OUR ROLE

The Spirit of 2010 Signage Strategy provides planning guidance for the design, construction and installation of trail signage on the Spirit of 2010 Trail. The strategy supports the following goals:

- Provide direction for the length of the trail
- Support safe passage along the route
- Minimize use by prohibited user types
- Increase awareness of Spirit of 2010 Trail
- Increase awareness of Trans Canada Trail
- Provide recognition to the partners and stakeholders involved with development of the trail
- Inform trail users of unique and significant biophysical, cultural, historical and geographical features of the trail
- Provide staging areas signage to define the trail entrance, communicate important information and provide overview and location mapping.
- Provide way-finding directional signage at junctions or decision points along the trail.
- Provide way-finding signage along the trail to support navigation of the complete length of trail.
- Provide mapping of trail route and landmark locations.
- Provide safety and warning signage along the trail where necessary.
- Provide regulatory signage.
- Include branding on trail signage.
